WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

• An early season Pacific storm system will be moving through northern California tonight through Monday bringing widespread precipitation.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

• https://alerts-v2.weather.gov/counties/CA

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Widespread rain at lower elevations Friday, and mountain snows increasing Friday night. Areas of gusty southwest winds ahead of the cold front moving through. High temperatures in the 50s, except 30s-40s in mountain locations.

*** Moist and cooler period next several days ***

Precipitation will eventually spread over the area through tonight with residual precipitation on Saturday across far southern and eastern. Wetting precipitation of a tenth of an inch or more is likely over the majority of the area although the lower Cascades and northern Sierra areas will be favored the most. Up to 3.5 inches of liquid water may fall over the northern Sierra during a 48 hour period. Snow accumulations are generally expected above 4000 feet although the more significant accumulations will be above 5000 feet. S-SW winds will also increase ahead of the trough. Expect gusts between 25 to 35 mph with locally up to 45 mph over the higher exposed ridges and across portions of the Sacramento Valley. Strongest winds will occur on Friday. Another Pacific disturbance is expected Sunday into Sunday night and should provide another round of precipitation. Cooler, higher humidity and unsettled conditions should continue well into next week with another system forecasted for midweek.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Light rain shower chances along the Central Coast Friday and increasing in the southern Sierra Friday night. Gusty southwest winds around 10 to 20 mph with gusts to 30 mph for mountain and desert locations. High temperatures in the 60s, except 30s and 40s in the southern Sierra, and 70s in the desert areas.

***Cool weather over the weekend with rain likely over Central CA***

A developing trough will produce cool, humid weather with abundant cloud cover during the next several days. High temperatures will change little through early next week with highs in the 60s along the coast, 70s in the inland valleys to the mid 80s in the low desert. Southwest winds of 15-30 mph will be possible each afternoon in and near the desert. The marine layer will be quite deep over Southern California, resulting in patchy night and morning drizzle through Monday. Central California will see a band of rain drop southward through the evening hours Friday, resulting in light precipitation for areas along the central coast and Sierras. This trough will dissipate before reaching Southern California. A second system may bring another chance of rain, mainly to Central and Northern California, Sunday night into Monday. Rainfall totals from the two systems added together may be over an inch in the Sierras north of Fresno County with lesser amounts across Central California. Southern California will likely see amounts under a quarter of an inch. Sunnier and weather may return next Tuesday or Wednesday, but another system may bring rain to the northern half of the state next Wednesday night or Thursday. No offshore winds are expected the next 7 to 10 days.
